

Abstract

A ceramic heater unit having at least a heater and electrodes for passing electricity through above heater to elevate the temperature of the heater, characterized in that above heater and above electrodes are respectively made of a material containing silicon carbide, and above heater and above electrodes are integrally constructed with use of a binder made of a material containing silicon carbide.